LIGHT FANTASTIC

We're entranced by the low lit world of Laura Buckley, an Irish artist residing in the United Kingdom. Working across a variety of media including video, sculpture and photography, she combines kinetic sculptural installation and multi screen video projection and seeks to engage the viewer by their physical inclusion within the work.

Perception is heightened by light, movement, sound and image. Treating the light beam of the projector as a sculptural medium, the work moves physically within the installation by the projection of video through rotating Perspex structures. Images and light are reflected across wooden and metal structures, the viewer and the entire space.

Her films predominantly demonstrate the gestural manipulation of materials, where reflective sculptural forms are moved in space to both highlight and abstract their environment. Performative studio activities are juxtaposed with real life events, exploring and blurring points of separation and overlap. Dealing with structure and materials, both physically, with the tangible components of the work, as well as virtually within the films, the installations are concerned with demystifying process and revealing systems of production.
